

Introduces the new Popcorn Hour S-300 digital signage solution

Fremont, CA. January 31st 2012 – Syabas Technology Inc., a leading global distributor of digital entertainment solutions, is excited to announce the latest addition to the Popcorn Hour product line. The Popcorn Hour S-300 a small-sized and powerful digital signage solution utilizing the latest Sigma Design's SMP8671 chipset.

The small, fanless design offers a flexible solution for displaying full 1080p HD video and photos. In addition to supporting video, photos and lossless audio there is support for weather, twitter, and RSS feeds in a multi-zone format. The Popcorn Hour S-300 comes with a 4GB USB drive for local storage or can play a centralized playlist on the network. With the included PC application playlists can be scheduled to run on certain days and at certain times.

The Popcorn Hour S-300 supports HDMI, VGA, and stereo analog audio output. Local storage is available through the two USB ports and content can be played over the network via the 10/100Mbps LAN connection (WLAN optional). An included infrared (IR) receiver and remote control offer convenient local operation of the device.

“The new Popcorn Hour S-300 offers so many opportunities due to its size, power and connectivity,” said Manfred Karl VP Sales EMEA region. “which makes it possible for anybody to easily create a professional digital signage solution at a very attractive price.”

The MSRP for the Popcorn Hour S-300 will be €249 in the European Union (including VAT) and $219 for those elsewhere. The Popcorn Hour S-300 will be available in April 2012.

The innovative products by Syabas Technology, Inc. enable people to enjoy a wide assortment of content including home videos, photos, music and online movies.
